Good afternoon, I hope you're enjoying the hottest days of the year with a cool drink in your hand and a chance to relax. We are busy planning the upcoming Seattle Shield meeting which lands on the auspicious date of Tuesday, September 11th. The meeting will be held from 9:00-11:00, in the [REDACTED] We are changing the location for this month only to note the anniversary of 9-11-01.

Seattle Shield was formed in 2009 as a direct response to suspicious activity that occurred in our city with the goal of reducing pre-operational surveillance by terrorist organizations. Since the attacks of September 2001 are the reason we exist, we didn't think the "coincidence" of our meeting date and the anniversary this year could go by without some sort of recognition. Next month we will have what we think are informational and relevant speakers, special guests and training that will assist you in protecting your business and our city.

Please put the date on your calendar, we look forward to seeing you all there. If you'd like to invite potential members, and/or special guests, please do so, but realize that our space is limited to a capacity of approximately 125 folks, it will be first come-first served.

Please contact me if you have questions. Thank you for your service to the City of Seattle and Seattle Shield.

Good afternoon - thank you to all who were able to attend our September meeting. It was an opportunity to reflect on the extremist actions of September 11, 2001 and reinforce why we do what we do day in and day out. We appreciate all of you who responded so positively to their performance, as well our special venue at the [REDACTED]

Thank you also to [REDACTED] for his reflection on how quickly a good day can turn tragic. The Federation provides a positive example of making the best of a horrible situation; the development of Safe Washington (<http://www.safewashington.com/>) came directly out of tragedy, the Jewish Federation shooting in 2006. We can all learn from their example of setting up a communications network within the Jewish community. Mr. Carstensen was followed by a refresher from Sgt. Tom Mahaffey on what to do in the case of an active shooter in the workplace.

Remember, Seattle Shield meetings are held every other month on the second Tuesday; our next meeting will be held at [REDACTED] on Tuesday, November 13th at 9:00 a.m. We will have a review of cases and reported suspicious activity as well as an informative speaker and networking opportunities. Seattle Shield "BLAST"

Good afternoon and welcome to the new Seattle Shield Weekly Blast. Each week we plan to share with you relevant articles and training materials that we hope you'll find helpful in your day to day operations. Links to the documents will then be filed under the resources tab of the Seattle Shield website: <http://seattleshield.org/> under "BLAST."

This week we're passing on two notices. One we received from our partners at Joint Base Lewis-McChord entitled: "Explosive Device Stand-Off Distances." The unclassified article was written and made available to us by JBLM Criminal Intelligence Specialist Michael Chesbro. This information, along with the available SPD Arson Bomb Threat Planning documents, will assist you in training your employees on what to do in case an explosive device is located on your property.

The second notice was brought to our attention by Doug Larm, SPD's Sr. Intelligence Analyst and Editor of InFOCUS. This article was published on Tuesday by the San Diego Daily Transcript (<http://www.sddt.com/>). It details an interview with Deputy Chief Michael Downing, the commanding officer of the Counter-Terrorism and Special Operations Bureau of the Los Angeles Police Department. In the article Deputy Chief Downing shares his thoughts about the continuing threat to Los Angeles from terrorists.

Both of these documents are attached to this message and can be shared with interested parties. If you come across items you'd like to share with the Seattle Shield membership please let us know and we'll pass them along in a future BLAST.

As you know, our goal is to provide best practices for reporting suspicious activity. To further that goal, we want to bring your attention to an article from the First Amendment Center. The Center serves as a forum for the "study and exploration of free-expression issues, including freedom of speech, of the press and of religion, and the rights to assemble and to petition the government." Founded by John Seigenthaler, the First Amendment Center has offices in the John Seigenthaler Center at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., and at the Newseum in Washington, D.C.

The article entitled "Photography and the First Amendment" notes some interesting court cases and examples of photography as it relates to public spaces, accident scenes, etc. Two sections we found particularly interesting as they relate to Seattle Shield are:

"Photography/Videography and Police Activity" and "Photography and Public Spaces." You can locate those sections by using the find (ctrl-f) feature on your browser.

<http://www.firstamendmentcenter.org/photography-the-first-amendment>.

As always, if you see someone taking photographs, taking notes, or measuring space in a suspicious manner, call 9-1-1, take note of the behavior, and be able to articulate exactly what is suspicious and follow your internal protocols. After the fact, follow up with an alert via the Seattle Shield website at seattleshield.org.

Good morning!

Last week many of you received an email from a company that provides defensive tactics training. This email was not approved by us, and it brings up a point that we wish to address.

It is our expectation that the information found on the Seattle Shield website (photographs, phone numbers, email addresses, etc.) only be shared by members in a manner consistent with Seattle Shield's mission "...to provide a collaborative and information-sharing environment between the Seattle Police Department and public/private security services in Seattle's downtown core...to assist SPD efforts to identify, deter, defeat, or mitigate potential acts of terrorism or organized crime by reporting suspicious activity in a timely manner."

As such, please refrain from promoting anything using the Seattle Shield contacts register without first screening it through Detective Tim Renihan. We also have an expectation that no one will share Seattle Shield alerts outside the membership, except to notify their personnel as necessary to support the mission of sharing/reporting suspicious activity.

Good morning. For those of you who may find yourselves interacting with the media in regards to a hazardous event, there is training available to assist you. This event is co-sponsored by Washington State Emergency Management and SAFE Washington and will be held at Temple De Hirsch Sinai on January 29th & 30th. See the attached registration form for more information or contact [REDACTED]

Description:

This course examines the role of public information in managing an All Hazards incident/crisis situation and provides practical training in crisis communication techniques.

In such an incident, it is imperative that community leaders, incident managers, and public information officers are prepared to communicate with the public through the news media. The course focuses on the role of public information in incident management, the information needs of the public in a crisis, and the various means of effectively communicating through the news media. Upon completion of the course, participants will understand the role of public information in a all hazards incident, and be prepared to plan and execute public information actions in the event of such an incident.

Continuing Education Credits:

IACET - 1.6 CEUs

ACE - 1 Hour College Credit (Lower Division)

Participant Audience:

The course is designed for participants whose duties may require them to interface with news media representatives during their response to an incident or major disaster.

Course participants who would benefit from this training include the officials, public information officers, department heads, public health and medical personnel, and security/emergency management from both the public and private sectors.

Prerequisites: No formal prerequisites. However, it is recommended that participants be familiar with the Incident Command System as outlined in FEMA Independent Study Program Courses IS100 and IS200.

Good day! Seattle Shield member [REDACTED] asked us to pass along a resource that has just become available from DHS. They now have a website fully dedicated to "Active Shooter Preparedness" which provides training, resource materials and research information. This following paragraph describes this new page on the DHS website (<http://www.dhs.gov/activeshooter>):

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) aims to enhance preparedness through a "whole community" approach by providing training, products, and resources to a broad range of stakeholders on issues such as active shooter awareness, incident response, and workplace violence. In many cases, there is no pattern or method to the selection of victims by an active shooter, and these situations are by their very nature unpredictable and evolve quickly. DHS offers free courses, materials, and workshops to better prepare you to deal with an active shooter situation and to raise awareness of behaviors that represent pre-incident indicators and characteristics of active shooters.

The specific information available is as follows:

- Active Shooter: What Can You Do Course
- Active Shooter Webinar
- Active Shooter Workshop Series
- Active Shooter: How to Respond Resource Materials
- Options for Consideration Active Shooter Training Video
- U.S. Secret Service (USSS) Active Shooter Related Research
- Active Shooter Resources for Law Enforcement and Trainers: Request for Access to Joint Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) Portal

Additionally please contact Detective Renihan, SPD with questions or information. Thank you.

17 Security Cameras Disabled and Destroyed in Puget Sound Region, Wed, 02/13/2013.

In the opening weeks of February, 2013, we have removed and destroyed 17 security cameras throughout the Puget Sound region. This act is concrete sabotage against the system of surveillance and control. It is also a message of solidarity and a wish of strength to the Seattle Grand Jury Resisters, those currently incarcerated and those not. Finally, this act announces our participation in the game of CAMOVER, called for by comrades in Germany. The movement known as CAMOVER is a world wide attempt by Anarchist groups to destroy public and private property security cameras. Their blog site lists some of the successful attempts they have had in disabling cameras overseas. Barefoot Bandit Brigade, Puget Sound, USA.

Good afternoon,

With the horrific incident in Boston this week I wanted to let everyone know that we have no further information than is being posted on media outlets and we still have no information of a connection to Seattle. This event reiterates the importance of your contact information in the membership directory.

I also wanted to highlight a recent incident where a Seattle Shield member acted appropriately with a suspicious bag. On 3-28-13, an alert security officer noticed a bag was padlocked to a tree. There was no one around the bag, so 911 was called. SPD responded and were able to locate the owner of the bag. The owner was handing out leaflets in the area and secured his bag to the tree so it would not be stolen. A suspicious incident that had a reasonable explanation, but it needed to be investigated.

When looking for suspicious activity behavior and demeanor are the key indicators. As always please report suspicious behavior by calling 911 and follow up with [REDACTED] or SPD CIS 206-684-8770.

Good afternoon. We hope you enjoyed our May Shield meeting. We had a great turn out; thank you to all who were able to attend and to those who were able to bring guests. We'd also like to thank [REDACTED] for their support in bringing [REDACTED] to Seattle. It's safe to say we learned something and she had a great time during [REDACTED] visit here. Q13 News conducted a short interview of [REDACTED] asking, among other things, about the Boston Marathon bombing. Click here to view it.

Our next meeting will be held just after the 4th of July holiday on July 9th at 9:00, and just so you don't get used to cushy accommodations, [REDACTED]

Our speaker will be [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] He is a dynamic speaker, we're sure you'll both enjoy him and learn something. From time to time we have to deal with aggressive and or mentally ill individuals that come into our places of business. We think you'll walk away with some helpful tools and resources.

Also, make sure you visit the website on a regular basis – we've recently posted some helpful

As always, let us know if you have suggestions for us.

See you July 9th!

LAPD deputy chief talks terrorism threats

By KATHERINE CONNOR, The Daily Transcript
Tuesday, November 6, 2012

With 574 hits on jihadi extremist websites in just one day and 76 police encounters with sovereign citizens since January, Los Angeles has its share of potent, varied terrorist threats.

Deputy Chief Michael Downing, the commanding officer of the Counter-Terrorism and Special Operations Bureau of the Los Angeles Police Department, discussed the increasing role state and local police forces are playing in this fight on terror at a counter-terrorism summit Thursday.

"A centralized opponent cannot effectively defeat or fight a decentralized adversary," Downing said at the HALO Counter-Terrorism Summit at Paradise Point Resort and Spa.

As the main threats to the United States become more decentralized, Downing said American security and intelligence forces are decentralizing as well, and turning their attention inside U.S. borders. This gives local police forces greater responsibility, and necessitates improved vertical communication.

"Considering the decentralized adversary that we have now, and considering the threat is more complex and because of that the intelligence signal has weakened, it's harder to find these guys," Downing said. "Where we used to be trying to find the needle in a haystack, today it's like trying to find a piece of hay in that same haystack. It's more difficult."

Part of improving the communication flow across local, state and federal divisions began with 64 major cities establishing, prioritizing and sharing their top threat domains with other jurisdictions to allow for greater collaboration and intelligence sharing between units and forces.

In Downing's L.A. area, the top four adversaries, prioritized by level of threat, are government of Iran operatives and the proxy Hezbollah, homegrown violent extremists drawing inspiration from al-Qaida, sovereign citizens focused on engaging cops with violence, and animal rights activists.

Downing said the increasing number of encounters with sovereign citizens his force has faced makes him expect that this threat will become the top priority by the end of next year. He was also particularly shocked by the 574 hits to extremist jihadi websites from within L.A. in one day. Even allowing for part of that number to be from researchers, students or cops, he said it was still very high.

According to Downing, the top threat from Iranian and Hezbollah operatives is due in large part to population. Los Angeles has the largest Iranian population in the world outside of Iran, and while Downing said 99 percent of them are patriotic, hardworking Americans, there's a small element that aims to do harm. L.A. also has the largest Hezbollah population in the United States, which Downey said is cause for concern.

He is convinced that a community policing approach, coupled with a hunt-and-pursue model, is necessary to stop these would-be terrorists from realizing their goals. Downing said police forces are pretty good at using intelligence to diminish operational capability, since this is the model that's been in use for years, while the community policing approach was first used in L.A. about six years ago.

"I think the longer-term solution to what we're experiencing today is going to rest with the communities themselves," Downing said. "And the roles and responsibilities of cops, sure there are times when we have to transition to being a soldier, where we control through force and fear. We have to do that every day, but hopefully more often, we are in the position of a public servant, where we try to inspire common values in people so they want to protect the same values we believe in, and then we raise ethical stature in communities so they're just as responsible for policing as we are."

While great strides have been made with this approach and with intelligence sharing, there's still work to be done.

"We need to enrich our data sets," Downing said. "We need to share those data sets. You know it's recently, as of last week, after all of what, the last 40 or 50 years, we finally signed a [memorandum of understanding] with the L.A. Sheriff's Department to share our data. That's crazy, and we're right next to each other. And imagine what we're missing in our investigations by not having that."

Downing said the next step is for the 17 federal intelligence agencies to join the 17,500 state and local law enforcement agencies in sharing information at intelligence fusion centers to improve vertical communication. Continuing to improve the community policing platform, particularly working with community leaders, is also key to abating terrorism in Downing's view.

"When you start hearing some of these leaders establish these mantras that say 'home is not where our grandparents are buried, but home is where our grandchildren are to be raised,' and that what we really have to protect are our values, then you're getting somewhere," Downing said.

This 16 hour course is designed to provide an overview for individuals who are likely to interface with the media. The media represent one of the most critical target audiences with whom the PIO must communicate during a all hazards incident. The communication needs of the media, and the various options available for effectively communicating with the media will be the focus of this course.

- Differentiation between various methods of communication with media and associated advantages/disadvantages of each method
- Phases of the crisis communication life cycle
- Development of effective crisis communication plan
- Communication objectives/action steps taken during the planning/preparation, triggering event, early stages, duration, assessment/modification, and resolution
